A multinational company in the food processing sector has been operating in India for about two decades. The company has recently decided to expand its production. Since the space is not adequate at present location. It was decided to expand its production. Since the space is not adequate at present location, it was decided to shift the factory to a new location which is about 20 kms away from its present site. As the workers transferred to the new site were living in the town nearby, the union demanded an increase of Rs. 300/- per month in the salary, but the Company offered to give Rs. 140/- only to cover the cost of transportation.

When the plant was being shifted to the new site, negotiations went on uninterrupted between the management and the Union on several issues including pay hike. However, both the parties could not come to a settlement every after 6 months of shifting to a new facility.

The management was firm on their decision even though the union indicated some flexibility with respect to pay hike. The union refused to compromise on the issue and they adopted go-slow strategy to pressurize the management. Consequently, the production went down drastically, but still the Management was firm on their stand. In the meanwhile, the management charged some of the Trade Union leaders and suspected them.
